School for Commercial Vegetable Growers Spotlights Organic & Conventional Methods

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Orange and Ulster Counties will hold a day of classes spotlighting organic and conventional growing and pest management methods for area vegetable farmers on Thursday, March 3, 2005 at the Holiday Inn in Middletown. Information for those growing onions, sweet corn, pumpkins and tomatoes will be featured. There will also be sessions covering labor issues, new retail marketing opportunities and farmland protection. The registration fee is $55 per person at the door and includes a continental breakfast, lunch, and all conference material. 3.5 pesticide re-certification credits in categories 1a, 10, & 23 are available. Registration forms are downloadable at our website: www.cce.cornell.edu/ulster (click on Agriculture Programs) or to receive more information, please call 845-340-3990.
